Chris Corps, CEO, Pivotal IRM

Chris is a land economist who has led multiple international initiatives including restructuring senior's care for the province of BC and embedding sustainability into international financial standards.

The Building is the Cure

Design and materiality have both conscious and subconscious impacts on occupants and users. The new Riverview Hospital demonstrated that a building can improve patient care, reduce medical costs and patient incidents and even advance treatment completion.

As a result, the concepts of Riverview have been incorporated in mental health facilities throughout British Columbia.